CALL FOR ABSTRACTS

4th Annual Graduate Student Conference

Going Global: Collaborative Visions for a Sustainable Future

April 21, 2017 at UCLA

The UN’s Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) present a vision of development that aims to promote growth in developing countries while addressing challenges ranging from gender inequality to environmental sustainability. The 4th Annual Going Global conference will bring together graduate students from across disciplines to critically examine the themes of the SDGs and explore solutions and innovations for a better future. We welcome submissions from all disciplines that will offer diverse perspectives on the evolution and status of these issues globally.

Panel topics inspired by the SDGs, may include, but are not limited to:

♦ Mitigating Poverty and Insecurity
♦ Providing Quality Education for All
♦ Confronting Racial, Ethnic, & Gender Inequalities
♦ Conflict, Peace, & Justice
♦ Challenges in Global Health
♦ Environmental Sustainability
♦ Migration and the Refugee Crisis
♦ Art, Activism and Alternative Visions of Development

These proposed panels are designed to serve as points of departure rather than restrictive categories, and we welcome papers and projects with creative connections to these themes.

Awards for the most outstanding works will be presented at the reception following the conference. Details about the awards will be made available on our website soon.

Abstracts of 150-250 words must be submitted by February 12, 2017 on our website.
